Gift 061022 - Parakeet - by Julie DE-14467
Julie got this bird from a friend. She kept it in her freezer. Initially she wanted to 3D scan it for her jewelry.

Gift 061022 – Starling – by Julie
Julie ordered this bird from a lab in Germany. Kept in freezer.

Find 061422 – Squirrel – Sidewalk DE- 10249
Found by Jona. He saw a woman had placed the animal under a tree by the roadside. It was noticeable that the squirrel had a fishing wire around its neck/in its mouth. No hooks were found, but it was very likely that it was stuck in its throat, causing its death. It wasn't run over, as there were no external injuries.

Find 0615 - Female Blackbird -

Find 0713 - Junikäfer - Gummersbach

Find 0718 - Moth - Swimming Pool DE-10319

The moth swam in the pool. Took home with a wasp and a beetle. All of them were still alive. However, the moth could no longer fly, even after hours on the balcony. I saw under the microscope how it suffered. At least, it looked like it... I decided to put it out of its misery. I carefully pierced it with a needle, so as not to damage it, so that I could still scan it. I poked it several times. It took a long time, probably an hour, until it stopped moving. What is it with insects? Why are they so difficult to kill compared to humans?
